- Honest & loyal
- Passionate about what I do

- A good mother

What's important to me

- Spending time with my family: family meal-times keep me grounded. We aim to share good food, chat, argue and/or laugh together at least 2-3 times per week.
- Time with my close friends: A catch up or a walk with a good friend and a few drinks with close friends at least once a month feeds my good humour
- To keep challenging myself whether it is to stay up to date with the latest technologies, try new recipes or change a routine – currently I am going swimming in the sea once/week
- To work as part of a supportive, creative, motivated, enthusiastic team who embrace change and value each other
- Meeting people who are as passionate as I am about ensuring young people with learning disabilities get the same opportunities in life as everyone else
- For my team to feel that they are supported and that they can come to me to discuss anything they are concerned about

How Best to Support Me

- Sometimes issues relating to the 'disability world' can overlap between work and home. If things are going on at home that I have shared with you, remind me that there are things in work that can wait until I am feeling more grounded.
- I have a very energetic mind but it is really important to me that you challenge my ideas or suggestions either for my own good or for the good of Blossom Ireland.
- I need laughter, fun and positivity at work. Please feel free to add to this with me!
